

Leadership and Management Weekend

21-22 September 2019
Jury's Inn, Nottingham

Using the seven domains of the NHS Leadership Framework, the course will be structured in small facilitated interactive group sessions, analysing questions around leadership, policy and management topics. The course aims to combine three elements: preparing senior trainees for geriatric consultant interviews, helping newly appointed geriatric consultants avoid potential pitfalls in their first year and providing up-to-date knowledge of relevant leadership and management issues.

Event Overview

Medical leadership and management is of growing importance. Developing effective services for frail older patients lie at the heart of future planning for the NHS and commissioners and policymakers are increasingly turning to consultant geriatricians to provide expert advice on clinical governance and service delivery models.

New consultant geriatricians need to have skills in clinical leadership to ensure that services change and develop to meet the specific challenges raised by our patients. While there are many generic courses on management and leadership available to help specialist registrars, there are none which address the specific needs of trainees of one of the largest medical specialties, geriatric medicine. To help address this gap, the British Geriatrics Society is holding a two-day residential course specifically designed for senior StRs in geriatric medicine, focusing on management and leadership issues that affect health services for older people.

The objective is for each delegate to leave the weekend with a personal development plan for leadership and management for the start of their career as a consultant in geriatric medicine. It is a not-for-profit course run for the benefit of BGS members and offers exceptional value for money.

With expert BGS facilitators such as BGS President Dr Eileen Burns, BGS President Elect Professor Tahir Masud and Professor Adam Gordon the course will be very both practical and dynamic.

Who should attend

The course is aimed at senior (ST6 and ST7) specialist registrars in geriatric medicine, who are approaching their final registrar year and looking for a consultant position in the near future.

Why participate

- Practice and develop interview skills – anticipate and prepare for potential questions.
- Network with other senior trainees, experienced consultants and BGS office holders.
- Gain vital knowledge on key leadership and management challenges facing health services for older people.
- Get professional guidance & assistance on how to avoid common pitfalls in leading the delivery of services for frail older patients
- Develop contacts to render help and mentorship during your first year as a geriatric consultant

Recommended reading list

The reading list is non-compulsory but it covers some important recent papers that will shape leadership and management agendas for geriatricians over the coming years alongside more generic issues of which you should be aware. The list is not exhaustive and has been whittled down to give a primer ahead of the course. You can download it on the course page.
